CLASSICS

- Albion, Robert. Introduction to Military History (1929).
A standard textbook used by generations of American students of military history. D 25
A 14
- Aron, Raymond. On War (1959).
Concentrates on nuclear armaments and attempts at disarmament. Is nuclear war avoidable? DS 843
A 91
- Atkinson, C. T. Marlborough and the Rise of the British Army (1921).
The life and times of one of England's greatest soldiers is discussed in this book, as well as the beginnings of England's first truly professional Army. DA 462
M3 A55
- Brady, S. G. Caesar's Gallic Campaigns (1947).
Using as his chief source Caesar's own account of his campaigns in Gaul, the author sheds new light on one of the great military events of history. DG 264
B 72
- Churchill, Winston. Marlborough, 4 Vols. (1933-1938)
A labor of love, told in great detail but in the richest of prose by a descendant of one of England's great warriors. DA 462
C 45
M3 C45
- Clausewitz, Karl Von. On War (1911, 1950, 1953, 1968).
Probably one of the most studied of all military works. Clausewitz, a Prussian general and military theorist, is probably the greatest philosopher of war and many of his theories are still being quoted. U 102
C 65
- Davies, Godfrey. Wellington and His Army (1954).
An account of the methods used by Sir Arthur Wellesley, Duke of Wellington, another of England's great soldiers, to organize and administer the armies he led to victory. DA 68.12
W4 D25
- Douhet, Giulio. The Command of the Air (1943, 1972).
Chief of the Italian air arm during World War I, Douhet argues that air power could be used to win a war by breaking the enemy's will to fight by bombing his cities. He has since been known as the "apostle of air power" and is considered a leading air power theoretician. UG 630
D 73
- Dodge, T. A. Gustavus Adolphus (1895).
The book is about one of the great captains of the 17th century, who is known as the father of modern field artillery and of the concept of massed, mobile artillery fire. DL 706
D 64
- Earle, E. M., editor. Makers of Modern Strategy: Military Thought from Machiavelli to Hitler (1971).
A history of strategic thinking, mainly European, by 20 historians and analysts of military affairs. U 162
E 12
- Falls, C. B. A Hundred Years of War (1953).
A noted British military historian surveys the conduct of war in Western society from the opening of the Age of Revolution. U 39
F 19
- Freeman, D. S. R. W. Lee, 4 Vols (1934-1936).
A detailed and a compassionate treatment of the South's great military leaders during the American Civil War. E 467.1
L4 F83
- Fuller, J. F. C. Armoured Warfare (1943).
The author, a 20th century British military theoretician, argues persuasively for an "all tank" army. He sees dismounted infantry playing a limited role on the future battlefield. U 175
G7 F9
- Fuller, J. F. C. Decisive Battles: Their Influence Upon History and Civilization, 2 Vols (1939-1940).
The volumes focus on the results of combat in the past, and provide an excellent starting point for more detailed studies of individual battles and campaigns. D 25
F 95
- Garthoff, R. L. Soviet Military Doctrine (1953).
One of the earliest attempts to explain the Soviet approach to war. Still highly valuable for its insights into Soviet military organization and administration. U 43
R9 G2

- Goerlitz, Walter. History of the German General Staff, 1657-1945 (1953).
Considered to be one of the better studies of that Prussian, later German, military institution -- the Great General Staff -- and its influence on the conduct of war on the European continent. UB 225
G3 G5
- Henderson, G. F. A. Stonewall Jackson and the American Civil War, 2 Vols (1905-1911).
An American Civil War classic, written by a British soldier who rode and fought with Stonewall Jackson in some of the latter's more memorable campaigns. E 467.1
J15 H5
- Herodotus. The History of Herodotus, 2 Vols (1921).
A study of early Greek military history. F 58
H 5
- Hittle, J. D. The Military Staff, Its History and Development (1949).
The book deals with the history and development of the general staffs of the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Russia. UB 220
H 63
- Huntington, Samuel P. The Soldier and the State (1957).
A history of US civil-military relations and a strong defense of the military ethic. UA 23
H 92
- Jomini. Summary of the Art of War (1947).
Antoine Henri Jomini was one of the first military theorists to set down certain principles of war by defining various kinds of warfare and describing different types of military operations. U 162
J 71
- Liddell Hart, B. H. Decisive Wars of History (1929).
A survey of warfare from ancient times to World War I by an extremely prolific British military writer and thinker. D 25
L 619
- Liddell Hart, B. H. The Remaking of Modern Armies (1927).
An argument that sees the tank as the dominant force on the future battlefield and calls for either motorizing or mechanizing all infantry forces. Also sees airpower playing an important role in warfare. U 102
L 62
- Liddell Hart, B. H. The Sword and the Pen (1976).
A selection of the great writings on military topics by historians and authorities of all nations from ancient times to the present day. U 19
S 97
- Liddell Hart, B. H. Strategy of the Indirect Approach (1941, 1954).
Calling on past history, the author cites the fallacy of head-on attacks and argues that well thought out maneuverings by mobile forces can overcome enemy forces while suffering relatively few casualties. D 25
- Liddell Hart, B. H. The Future of Infantry (1933).
A call for re-thinking Western views on future infantry actions. The author advocates fighting at night and the development of such night fighting aids as artificial moonlight and artificial fog. He also favors two kinds of Infantry-- heavy-and-light -- and offers a number of specific, practical suggestions for equipping infantry organizations. UD 145
L 5
- Machiavelli, Nicolo. The Art of War, 2 Vols (1905).
The author was the first man to write about the significance of modern warfare and to portray it accurately. Although he was often wrong in his predictions about weapons and their employment, he is still remembered as being the first interpreter of the nature of war and of modern politics. U 161
M 18
- Machiavelli, Nicolo. The Prince and the Discourses (1950).
This is sometimes described as the first book on modern political science. The author divorced politics from morality and claimed that success was based on force. He understood the nature of the sovereign nation-state and argued that its existence depended on its military strength. JC 143
M 14
- Millis, Walter. Arms and the State (1958).
A history of US defense policy from 1930- 957, with emphasis on the post-World War II period. The author describes the evolution of American military institutions and relates the development of those institutions to parallel social and economic forces in national life. U 21
M 62

- Montross, Lynn. Rag, Tag, and Bobtail: The Story of the Continental Army, 1775-1783 (1952). E 208

An excellent and well-written account of the travails of the American Army during the Revolutionary War and of its final success at Yorktown.
- Montross, Lynn. War through the Ages (1960). U 27
M 6
A survey of the art and science of warfare as it developed between 490 B.C. and 1944 A. D. A good summary, and a fine research guide.
- Nelson, O. L. National Security and the General Staff (1946). UB 223
N 33
The author attempts to gauge what increased national security needs will mean to traditional American values and institutions. The primary focus of the book is on the development of the general staff concept in the United States.
- Nickerson, Hoffman. The Armed Horde, 1793-1939 (1940). U 27
N 53
A study of the rise, survival, and decline of the mass army.
- Oman, Charles. A History of the Art of War in the Middle Ages, 2 Vols (1924). U 37
O 5
The standard work on warfare during the medieval period. Covers generally the period from 378 to 1515.
- Parkman, Francis. Montcalm and Wolfe, 2 Vols (1923). E 199
P 24
The author, a famous American frontier historian, describes in vivid detail the events of the French and Indian War.
